

Hello Crew!

For this week's art lesson, we are revisiting the fun concept of one-point perspective. I made my first tutorial video. I hope you can't tell that I was really nervous!! Please start the lesson by watching the video. Let's see if you can figure out which line that I forgot to draw (I wish I could say I did it on purpose-haha). Next, there are several examples of finished work in the attached google slideshow. I also attached the real-life examples that we looked at before break. I can not wait to see what you come up with!! Please email me your finished work for your art credit for the week. As long as you have made an honest attempt at this, you will get credit!!! If you do not have a phone to take a picture of your work, you can use the camera on your Chromebook. Please let me know if you need assistance with this. I would be happy to help. Take care.
